1. About the end of July, 1955, MOGURT, the Hungarian vehicle-export agency, sent their representative, Gabor Paul, to Peking, China, to take over the direction of the MOGURT organization there.

2. [REDACTED]

3. Paul was at first very enthusiastic about his appointment to Peking, but lost enthusiasm as he became aware of the difficulties. He was told, for example, by the Director of the Vehicle Trust, that he should not report too many technical problems, as it would give a bad impression. Meanwhile MOGURT, which is responsible for exports, wants to be informed on all such problems. This leaves Paul in a dilemma. At the same time, the members of the Chinese Embassy in BUDAPEST have urged him to hasten the shipment of engine spare parts from the Gsepel and Ikarus firms, as these have been delayed and are urgently needed.
